Energy of man's body cures enlarged prostate

July 22, 2019, 11:49 AM IST Nikhil Chandwani in Desires of a modern Indian | Science | TOI

A man's own energy should be used in the treatment of benign prostatic hyperplasia (BPH) or enlarged prostate. Thermobalancing therapy with Dr Allen's Device provides this new technology. This therapy was patented in the United States namely 'Therapeutic device in method' as a unique treatment for chronic internal diseases, a patent number: US 9,408,744 B2. The patent is an acknowledgement that it is indeed a completely new treatment option for non-malignant diseases, including chronic prostatic problems.

Innovative technology

Thermobalancing therapy with Dr Allen's Device works by accumulating the body heat, keeps it and returns the energy to the affected organ. This therapy is entirely different from common heating treatments, because it locally regulates the affected organ's temperature, maintaining it within the normal body temperature range. All other treatments with imposed heat can be damaging, because high temperatures above 40°C can be harmful and low temperatures (≤35°C) can decrease cellular metabolism, thereby interfering with natural replenishment and healing.

The cause of chronic disease

All tissues of the body receive nutrients and warmth through the blood vessels at the capillary level. The length of capillaries in a human body is about 100,000 km, that is nearly two and a half times around the Earth. These small capillaries cover the whole body, and all organs of the body. The pathological activity of capillaries is in core of chronic disease development. The problem starts by different external factors, i.e. 'triggers', such as pain, stress, infection or excess of elements. A trigger places capillary net under stress leading to constriction and causing hypothermia in the tissue. This compromises their function, capillaries themselves can be initiators of angiogenesis, or the tissue growth.

Thermobalancing therapy tackles the cause

The growth of new tissue increases the pressure inside the organ and damages its proper functioning. The increased pressure inside the affected organ is the actual cause of its disease. This pressure causes pain and when the capsule of the organ is not strong to its enlargement. These processes lead to BPH. Enlarged prostate presses the urethra causing so called urinary symptoms, such as frequent urination during the day and at night, a weak urine flow and others. Thermobalancing therapy with Dr Allen's Device eliminates hypothermia in the affected prostate gradually reducing the size of enlarged prostate and consequently the symptoms, improving men's wellbeing.

Thermobalancing therapy tackles the cause

The growth of new tissue increases the pressure inside the organ and damages its proper functioning. The increased pressure inside the affected organ is the actual cause of its disease. This pressure causes pain and when the capsule of the organ is not strong to its enlargement. These processes lead to BPH. Enlarged prostate presses the urethra causing so called urinary symptoms, such as frequent urination during the day and at night, a weak urine flow and others. Thermobalancing therapy with Dr Allen's Device eliminates hypothermia in the affected prostate gradually reducing the size of enlarged prostate and consequently the symptoms, improving men's wellbeing.

Important features of Thermobalancing Therapy

- The treatment temperature must not exceed the normal body temperature;
- The thermolement must be applied tightly to the skin in the projection of the affected organ;
- The device must be used continuously for a prolonged period of time.

All these points are important, for example, it must be applied tightly, as, firstly, the thermolement accumulates the body heat and, secondly, the energy must overcome the skin barrier spreading toward the affected prostate. Since the chronic problem with the prostate develops over the years, treatment should be applied continuously, for a long time.

Why is BPH treatment important?

According to the last investigation in 2017, nearly 1 in 4 men will suffer from BPH over their lifetime.

So, BPH or prostate enlargement is one of the most common diseases affecting men over 50.

BPH drugs

Medications, acupuncture and other treatment options:

- are unable to liquidate the focus of hypothermia and improve blood circulation in the affected area;
- cannot effectively treat chronic internal diseases.

However, urologists prescribe BPH drugs when the urination symptoms appear. These medications cause various new health problems and depression.

For instance, alpha-blockers such as tamsulosin (Flomax) can cause weakness, retrograde ejaculation and as stated in the Canadian journal this medication have a higher risk of ischemic stroke during the initiation phase.

Another BPH drugs are 5-alpha-reductase inhibitors, such as finasteride and dutasteride, Avodart, Proscar and Propecia. they can cause irreversible side effects: impotence, depression, testicle pain, and even diabetes.

Evidence of the effectiveness of Thermobalancing therapy

A clinical trial involving 124 men with BPH, to whom the therapeutic Dr Allen's Device was administered exclusively as a mono-therapy, has confirmed the effectiveness and safety of Thermobalancing therapy. Thoroughly examined, before and after a 6-month treatment period, the patients reported a significant improvement to urinary. Investigation of parameters has shown significant reduction of the enlarged prostate size. Many articles were published in peer-reviewed medical journals, which can be found on the website Fine Treatment: "Medical Scientific Data" page.
